Natalia suggests that we should do a shorter time for Stress less. Cassandra states that she needs the names of the winners to announce them. Deveyn states that we should have a voting system that has their names in it. Cassandra states that the student should have to post the picture on their story and then the school would post the numbers with the picture and have people vote there.

Tom gives a history lesson on Henry Ford and how horses fell out of use. Tom asks us to think about what we need in the future, not what we need right now. Tom compares how phones affected college life to the way he thinks AI will affect college life. Tom talks about how the next generation will only know the time when they had AI. Tom talks about how to prompt AI to give a deeper, more thoughtful answer. Tom asks if people should be able to find KCC from an AI prompt. Tom discusses using AI to help reach out to people in different countries about KCC. Tom asks if getting into college should be as easy as buying clothes. Tom also asks if we should use AI to basically do all the work of getting into college for you. Tom tells us to write down a positive outcome for the future and a negative outcome for the future.
